ADVERTENCIA.

GENERALMENTE hablando, ningun Diccionario de Lenguas, aún el mas bien hecho, puede esperar el aprecio y la estimacion del publico por otro titulo que el de la utilidad que le proporciona.

Rara vez se considera en su autor otra especie de merito; no obstante que esta clase de obras exige mucho cuidado y trabajo, conocimientos muy extensos, un gusto mas delicado de lo que comunmente se imagina, y que reuna dos qualidades que pocas veces se hallan juntas: á saber la claridad y la precision. Todo esto es aun mas necesario en un Diccionario manual, que por su mismo destino no admite las explicaciones que los demas Vocabularios; y que debiendose ceñir á los mas estrechos limites, es preciso que exprese el significado de cada palabra con otra: y si esto no puede ser, que lo haga por una definicion la mas breve, lo que no es siempre facil de componer con la claridad.

Esta dificultad, que solo conocen bien los que trabajan en superarla, da derecho á la indulgencia de los lectores. Y en quanto á mi, aunque no me lisongeo de haberla vencido totalmente, puedo asegurar que no he omitido diligencia ni eficacia para conseguirlo. Con esta mira me he valido de todos los auxilios que podian serme utiles. He consultado las fuentes mas acreditadas, y me he fundado sobre las autoridades mas bien establecidas para asegurarme de la exactitud y merecer la confianza.

Mi guia, en quanto al Ingles, ha sido el Diccionario manual de Nugent, que es la primera obra que se ha publicado de esta especie, sirviendo de modelo á todos los posteriores, y que al mismo tiempo es uno de los mas justamente estimados. Tambien me he servido de la ultima edicion del grande Diccionario Ingles y Frances de Boyer, del Diccionario Ingles de Sheridan, del de Ash, y aun del de Jonhson quando las circunstancias lo han exigido.

En quanto al Español, me he servido con preferencia del Diccio- nario Español y Frances que yo publiqué en 1790: el qual, por lo que hace á la primera de dichas lenguas, fue fielmente extractado del de la Real Academia Española; á quien sin embargo he recurrido siem- pre que se ha presentado alguna duda que aclarar, o alguna omision que suplir.

Por lo demas, este Vocabulario Ingles y Español casi puede decirse el primero que se ha publicado; pues á pesar de la eficacia de algunos lexicographos en seguir el util exemplo que les dió Nugent, aun no se ha publicado un Diccionario de estas dos lenguas, pudiendose decir, sin separarse mucho de la verdad, que no le habia. El de Stevens, compuesto mucho antes del establecimiento de la Academia Espa- ñola, puede servir de poco; pues sobre ser muy incompleto, se opone, como tan viejo, á la Ortografia, y á los principios de la Syn- taxis y de la pronunciacion establecidos por la citada Academia. Pineda, que siguió á Stevens, no ha hecho sino mutilarle, y añadir á sus yerros, que ya eran muchos, la falta grave, inexcusable y aun temeraria, de apartarse de intento del systema gramatical de la Academia, pretendiendo subrogar su autoridad propia en lugar de la de un cuerpo de literatos especialmente ocupado por instituto en estudiar su lengua, y en perfeccionarla, como felizmente lo ha conseguido.

A estos dos lexicographos se siguió Delpino, cuyo Diccionario Ingles y Español, mas conforme á los verdaderos principios que los de sus predecesores, fue despues corregido y aumentado por Baretti. La obra de este ultimo en un tomo en fol. pareció en Londres en 1778, y fue reimpressa en Leon en dos tomos in-4º. en 1786, baxo el titulo supuesto de Londres. Pero a pesar de las numerosas adiciones y correcciones, que dice el autor habia hecho al Diccionario de Delpino, el suyo es tan incompleto é inexacto, que se debe mirar como guia poco segura, y casi siempre insuficiente (1).

Aunque el Diccionario que ofrezco al publico està reducido á un volumen mucho menor, me parece poder asegurar, que es muy superior á todos los mencionados, tanto por su mayor fidelidad y correccion, como porque comprehende una nomenclatura infinita-

(1) Ademas de los Dictionarios Ingles y Español, y Español é Ingles que acabo de mencionar, he sabido que habia uno recientemente impreso en Madrid, en 4 tomos en 4to. compuesto, por Thomas Connelly y Thomas Higgings confesores de la Familia Real. No habiendolo tenido en mi poder, me ha sido imposible de juzgarlo, y siento infinito que la dificultad de comunicacion entre las dos naciones, respeto al comercio de libros, me haya imposibilitado de sacar de esta importante obra los auxilios que segun todas apariencias, me hubiera ofrecido.

mente mas completa. Yo me creeré dichoso , si, como me lo he propuesto, puedo con esta obra contribuir á facilitar y extender la comunicacion entre dos pueblos estimables, poco separados por su situacion geografica, pero aun mas reunidos en varias partes del globo por sus relaciones politicas y de comercio.
